

Casa Laricciu

STYLISH LOG-HOUSE WITH PRIVATE POOL | FABULOUS HIDEAWAY RETREAT

Hidden on a natural balcony amid the boulder-studded slopes above Figari village, Casa Laricciu surveys a glorious sweep of maquis and mountains. Its name derives from the giant Corsican pines prized in centuries past by the Genoese, who used them to make ships' masts. Here, the distinctive red-hued timber has been deployed to create a wonderfully stylish log-house, whose elevated position ensures exceptional tranquillity and a glorious sense of space. Far-reaching views extend over the valley from Casa Laricciu's pool, set on a sunny deck to the rear of the property. The adjacent summer kitchen is ideal for evening barbecues and late-night gatherings, when you can swim under the starriest of skies, while savouring the aromas of citrus and wild myrtle.

The house itself has a wonderfully cosy feel: stripped logs walls, a high-pitched ceiling and comfy tan leather suite set the tone of the airy, open-plan lounge. On one side, a long, stone-topped breakfast bar enfolds a well equipped kitchen, while from the other end, a corridor leads to two cosy bedrooms and a stylish bathroom. Upstairs, the mezzanine floor is given over entirely to a romantic master bedroom, fitted with its own bathtub.

On lazy summer evenings, the loveliest sitting spot is undoubtedly the rear veranda, whose paved terrace enjoys uninterrupted views westwards across a shaded pebble garden to the valley. Only a short drive from Figari airport and some of Europe's most fabulous beaches, Casa Laricciu offers a dreamy, relaxing bolthole in the heart of the Corsican countryside.
